Dark Lady by Richard North Patterson Legal thriller does not really describe this book. There is anguished soul searching, perverse sex and brutal murders set in an economically challenged city. Stella Marz is an assistant prosecutor in the city of Steelton which was loosely based on Cleveland.

In Maine, as I write this, it is "Mud Season", which was an appropriate time, as it turned out, for me to read Dark Lady. It appears that Richard North Patterson is going through his Mud Season period with this effort. I agree with those that point out that he is unable to write convincingly in the mind of a woman.
