Subaru Forester Manual Transmission Fluid Change Cost

If you drive a Subaru with a manual transmission, you might think that you'll never have to have a transmission fluid exchange but that's not the case. The gearbox is a complicated mechanism and it requires the proper lubrication to prevent wear and damage. Protecting these components is Subaru gear oil which, like any fluid or oil in your vehicle, will break down over time and need to be changed for optimum performance.

What Type of Transmission Fluid for Subaru Legacy. Capacity

So basically, according to the manual, it says you don't need to change the transmission/rear diff fluid at all unless the car is driven in extreme conditions , in which case it should be changed every 15k . I think its safe to assume all STIs are driven under "extreme conditions" and I would recommend changing it every 15-20k.
