Kids Lie to Individuate From Their Parents. Sometimes kids use lying as a way to keep part of their lives separate from their parents. In psychology, we call this individuation, and it's quite normal. At times it may even seem that they make up needless lies about things that seem trivial. It can be baffling to parents.

How to Deal with Lying in Children and Teens - Why Kids Lie

Why Kids Lie. When addressing this common problem, parents should consider a child's age, the circumstances and reasons for the lie, and how frequently he engages in this behavior. For example, many younger children -- usually younger than age 6—cannot yet make a clear distinction between fantasy and reality, and their "lie" may actually just be an expression of their imagination.

What You Should Do When Kids Lie - Verywell Family

"Children who are anxious, who feel that they can't handle some kind of situation, may lie," says Dr. Berger. "It could be a sign of any number of stresses that the child is under." It could also be the sign of a smart kid who finds lying a convenient tactic.

Why Kids Lie—Age by Age - Parenting

We feel like we can never trust our child again. Why does lying cause such anger, pain and worry for parents? James: Parents are understandably very afraid of their children getting hurt and getting into trouble, but they have very little protection against these things as they send their kids out into the world. Kids learn from other kids and from the media, and it makes parents feel unsafe because they can't control the information and ideas that are being presented to their children.
